- Alice Ryan, LICSW, Seattle Children's Hospital

LUNCH 12:00pm - 12:50pm

SESSION 4 12:50pm - 1:50pm

Suicide Stigma

Description // The session will explore the barriers to support for kids and teens after a suicide death. Kids can be embarrassed that their parent or sibling died by suicide and therefore do not want to reach out for support from grief support providers. This session will explore the process that works at Mt Si High School. We will hear from Forefront who does suicide prevention work and support after a suicide death.

Learning Objectives // This session achieves the following:

1. Identify common concerns for a family after a suicide loss.
2. Learn specific approaches to connect with families and offer appropriate support.
3. Learn how to help the school and community support the family.
4. Learn the signs to look for in siblings and friends who are at greater risk of being suicidal.

Presenters // The presenter for this session is:

- Jennifer Barron, MA/MBA, Forefront Suicide Prevention

SESSION 5 1:50pm - 2:50pm

Developing Self Care through Racial Equity

Description // Participants will explore the frame of implicit bias and race prejudice, and how they become structured into institutions and systems. Participants will also gain insight into how children and adults internalize and act out of these biases, and be challenged to incorporate a race equity lens with current skills and experience.

Learning Objectives // This session achieves the following:

1. Developing your race equity lens so as to support self care in response to grief.
2. Introduction to Compassion Fatigue Tool Kit and how to develop a prevention tool kit for yourself.

Presenter // The presenters for this session are:

- Nikum Pon, PhD, Puget Sound Educational Service District
- Kimberly Beeson, MSW, Puget Sound Educational Service District

BREAK 2:50pm - 3:00pm

SESSION 6 3:00pm - 4:00pm

Art as a Tool for Social Justice

Description // We already know the facts: youth from disadvantaged backgrounds have less, sometimes far less, dedicated school time for art that is a valuable tool for processing grief. Some of them are attending schools that are failing in neighborhoods their families were relegated to due to redlining, racial covenants and other systemic injustice. Art is a unique and appropriate tool for young people to use to help understand their own grief experiences, but it goes much further than this. Youth who have dedicated time focused on art and creative expression have better overall outcomes. Art has a universal quality that can reach across cultures and backgrounds. Participants will be introduced to using art as a tool for social justice and practicing trauma-informed care while helping kids on their grief journey. One hands-on activity will be done.

Learning Objectives // This session achieves the following:

1. Introduce the concept of using art as a tool for social justice.
2. Introduce the use of trauma-informed care in creative expression programming.
3. Teach participants to conduct one hands-on creative expression activity.

Presenter // The presenters for this session are:

- Lacie Braun, LMHC, Art With Heart
